

"THE RED ROSE."
John C. Fisher's beautiful production, "The Red Rose," is to the sphere of song play what Du Maurier's "Tribby" was in its halcyon days to the dramatic stage. The sweetly sympathetic side of feminine life and its triumphs over environment is placed in a most fascinating manner. In this work Harry B. and Robert B. Smith and Robert Hood Bowers are said to have combined romance, heart interest, dancing, ensembles, novelties, brilliant color effects and superb costumes. A simple, though interesting, story is told in three acts, in which the theatergoer is delightfully entertained. "The Red Rose" comes to the Oliver on Friday evening.

AT THE ORPHEUM.

A new bill of clean, high-class vaudeville is being offered at the Orpheum for the last half of this week. Foremost on the program is the splendid act of the Five Melody Mads and a Men, a musical act full of novelty and thoroughly enjoyable. The entire stage is used and five pianos employed. The mads sing, play cleverly and one of them dances divinely. The man of the sextet plays skillfully and is variously useful in many of the numbers. The whole idea is clean, classy and away from the ordinary. It deserves the highest recommendation.

Joe Bogarty's lunatic bakers is another big act and very good in its class. A bakeshop setting affords excuse for various styles of gymnastics, comedy falls and a good deal of violent if not difficult tumbling. The table rocking finish fairly well done. Bogart and Nelson, made up as colored folks, fooled a lot of people, put over some good singing and talking and generally pleased. Davis, who bills himself mysteriously as a 20th century ideal, is a comedian, a monologist of ability. He makes his entrance from a seat in the audience and impersonates a physician called on the stage. He fools a few for a few minutes but with so many acts working with half the players in the audience it can scarcely be considered a novelty. Bombay Deerfoot, billed as a Sioux Indian, which he no doubt is, performs some simple juggling tricks and makes a short speech using good English.

THE SPENDER.

The story opens when Flo (Miss Lawrence) is a child in the south, playing in the fields and sunshine with her friend, Bob, her brother. Life is a joy to them; he swears he will always love her and that when he returns from college he will make her his wife. That is his promise.

Several years pass. Flo has become a successful star in vaudeville. In her dressing room one evening one of the girls shows her a beautiful tiara, saying that it was a gift from Bob. Lang, a young millionaire, the greatest spendthrift in the city. It develops that he is an easy mark whom everybody is trimming.

This picture will be shown at the Surprise theater today.

CLERKS WERE USED TO SECURE LAND GRANTS

Twenty-one Out of a Hundred Alaskan Claims Are Held for Cancellation.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 5.—The register of the land office at Juneau, Alaska, decided on Nov. 23 that 21 coal claims of the so-called McAlpine group of 200 on Cook inlet be held for cancellation because of fraud.

The promoters of the McAlpine group, William W. McAlpine, Albert H. Roehm, George W. Ross, Frank H. Andrus, Arthur L. Holmes and McCurdy C. Lebeau, all of Detroit, Mich., and John M. Bushnell of Chicago, were indicted in Detroit on March 5, 1911, for conspiracy to defraud the United States. The defendants have not been brought to trial.

The claimants were mostly clerks and stenographers employed by large corporations in Detroit, who are alleged to have signed powers of attorney and relinquishment when required by their employers to do so.

URSUS.

QUO VADIS.

Among the host of interesting characters in George Kleine's photo drama "Quo Vadis," which comes to the Oliver for one week commencing Monday, with daily matinees, none are more enjoyed by the audiences than Sig. Castellani as Ursus, the giant slave so thoroughly devoted to his mistress Lygia. He completely realizes in his appearance, height and muscular power, all that our mind pictures of the physical giant who could uplift trees and even tear a huge bull asunder. Castellani was not an actor until he posed for this photo-drama.

When the Cines stage directors passed the play, they found no difficulty in securing great actors for the various characters of the story until they came to Ursus, here they were blocked. In all the dramatic profession of France and Italy there was not a man who could anywhere approach the realization of Sienkiewicz's modest hero. They were about to give up in despair when one of the directors happened to run across Castellani, who was earning a living as a wrestler and had jumped suddenly into prominence by throwing two of the largest and most powerful kings of the mat in Sicily. In fact, it developed later that he had a reputation all over southern Europe as an herculean athlete.

The Cines company made Castellani a flattering offer for his services for one year and put him under the direction of a competent stage manager for six months. In the photo-drama his performance looms up prominently with all the other players of long experience and he wins as much by his simplicity and naturalness as they for the complexity of their art.

SECOND PART OF BEN HUR GIVEN

Rev. James L. Gardiner Tells of Adventures of Hero of Gen. Lew Wallace's Famous Masterpiece.

Rev. James L. Gardiner, D. D., delivered the second part of "Ben-Hur," taking up the thrilling chariot race and the scene of the crucifixion of Christ, Thursday night at St. Paul's M. E. church to an audience that filled the church to capacity.

Bringing into play all the finer qualities of elocution the pastor described each successive scene carrying his audience with him from the start. The choir began the program by rendering a song story of Christ's life and after the monologue finished the evening's entertainment with a song story of the resurrection.

Rev. Mr. Gardiner gave a short synopsis of the first part before beginning the second number, tracing the life of young Ben Hur. He showed how the boy had accidentally dropped a tile from the parapet of his home onto the head of the Roman governor and how he had been sent to the galleys for life, when his former friend, Messala, pointed him out as the assassin. He concluded his brief story of the first part by telling of Arrius, Ben Hur's benefactor, who released him from the galleys and later made him his adopted son.

When the pastor came to the thrilling chariot race in which the hero humiliated his enemy, Messala, he quoted from the words of the author, picturing the scene as the horses raced.

He traced the wanderings of the hero in his search for his lost mother and sister, Tirshah, who he found were out cast by her. The pathetic story of how they were cleansed by Christ and finally the crucifixion ended the monologue.

The church was well filled and it is estimated that more attended than at any previous service. Over 500 tickets were sold and it is believed that approximately $200 will be realized. This will be used toward the expenses of the church.

Mr. Gardiner will repeat the reading later for the benefit of the Trinity Presbyterian church.

ARE REFUSED LICENSE

George Sakamoto, a Japanese cook of Gary, and Mary Swan, an American, also of Gary, applied for a marriage license at County Clerk Christopher's office Thursday. The license was denied because the law requires that if the prospective bride is a resident of Indiana the license must be obtained in her home county.

Resinol Soap

improves the skin and hair

RESINOL SOAP is in every way pure, delightful and cleansing for the toilet and shampoo. In addition, it contains Resinol, which doctors everywhere prescribe for skin and scalp affections. Its regular use, therefore, tends to prevent pimples, blackheads, and blotches, to keep the hair thick and lustrous, and the scalp free from dandruff.

Resinol Soap is not artificially colored, its rich brown is given it by the Resinol medication. Costs 25 cents and is worth infinitely more to everyone who values a clear skin and good hair.

Resinol Ointment is most valuable in the treatment of facial eruptions, eczema, chafings, etc. For trial size of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, free, write to Dept. 18-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

RATS AND MATCHES BLAMED FOR BLAZE.

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—A combination of rats and matches is blamed for the Arcadia hotel fire in which 28 lives were lost, as a result of investigations by state officials Friday. Walter L. Wedger, state chemist, together with Inspectors James J. Grady and Frank P. Hardman of the state police, found in a closet where the fire apparently started, two rats which had been burned to death, one still holding a piece of burned paper between its teeth. The officials agreed that the rats probably chewed on matches thrown into the closet with sweepings, and thus started the blaze.

Mayor Fitzgerald made another tour of the lodging houses of the city tonight, ordering some sections of houses closed because of overcrowding or inadequate fire escapes, and making criticisms to the owners of conditions as he found them.

RIVER PARK.

A well attended and interesting meeting of Civic association was held Tuesday evening at the River Park school house. In the absence of the president Chris H. Ward, the vice president, presided.

The municipal lighting system was discussed and the same subject will be taken up at the next meeting. The lighting of the school building and better street car service was again brought up and discussed and the committee appointed at the last meeting were retained to look after the matter. After the business the following program was rendered by the school faculty:
